

BREAKING NEWS - January 14, 2016

The facts referred to in this article are thoroughly documented.

The Tennessee Court of Judge Christy Little has ordered the custody transfer of two adolescents to the custody of a father, released from many years of incarceration in Federal prison. The father is a virtual stranger to the children. Points of contact have been around brief visitation during which there were allegations injury related to a severe dog bite which was untreated during the period of visitation. Investigation by the Department of Children and Families led to a "No Contact Order" by DCF. However, now that the case is under the control of custody review, DCF is not able to intervene as per contact with DCF in Dec., 2015.

Of greatest concern is that the motives for seeking custody are involved with financial gain and having no concern for the feelings or well being of the children. These concerns are supported by the allegations that the father has been fraudulently claiming IRS deductions for the children since release from prison and states in his demand for custody that "these kids look fine to me.....they don't need psychiatric/medical care". This statement supported by Judge Christy Little, "These kids look fine to me", is a statement refuted by the treating psychiatrist who forwarded emergency statements to the court indicating that the children are being treated for the most serious symptoms of psychotic disorders, auditory and visual hallucinations with homicidal and suicidal psychotic direction. Judge Christy Little waved aside grave concerns of the psychiatrist who wrote to the court to alert the Judge to extreme danger faced by the children by any custody transfer which jeopardized the children's medical/psychiatric treatment.

Illegal orders have been in place since Nov. 3rd., 2015; illegal because of the complete and thorough arbitrary/capricious nature of the orders of this judge, as well as the disregard for all due process ordered by Tennessee courts.

Public commentary with regard to Christy Little includes not only rulings that are in total disregard to the well being of children, such as those in which subjects of the ruling have forwarded children into the hands of accused sexual abusers as well as those accused of physical and emotional abuse and neglect. Christy Little is purportedly fully aware of the substantiated charges of sexual abuse of the children at the hands of their drug addicted mother as the female child was brought to a Tennessee emergency at two months old because the methamphetamine addicted mother was allegedly "selling the new born while the child was in the custody of the mother as per DCF ordered visitation. The baby had to be brought to the mother's mother to seek medical attention. The baby was brought to the emergency room, allegedly "covered with cum and unable to breath".

DCF case worker Patsy Taylor, a DCF case worker, preserved the visitation rights of the mother to see the children despite the fact that the case worker knew that the mother was engaged in prostitution and drug addiction.

Both children were born crack addicted - fetal alcohol and drug syndrome is the precise term to describe severely physically disabled children. The child born to the same father as these two children in 2000` - Keith Harden (Transou) was also born with addiction to crack. Little Keith was a victim of drug and fetal alcohol syndrome. Keith lived fifteen (15) days of an agonizing brief life, following many surgeries to correct multiple organ deformity. Keith died in surgery, twice before he ultimately died. His biological father, the father of the current two children in question was in jail and not able to attend the baby's funeral.

The male child born to the same methamphetamine drug addicted mother, had to be seen in a Tennessee emergency room when he was approximately two (2) years old because of a "swollen penis". The methamphetamine drug addicted mother was reported to have allowed her child to be sexually abused by two young boys.

The maternal grandmother of these two children did gain custody of the children under a temporary order dating from 2002. However, the biological mother of the children, though continuing to be in and out of jail, has sought access to the children's support funds. She appears to have joined forces with children's biological father, released from Federal prison but not in contact or seeking visitation with the children until he suddenly appeared in Nov., 2015 seeking visitation which turned to a sudden in court request for custody and transfer of all financial benefits to him. Judge Christy little suddenly altered her Temporary Order of Custody from the maternal grandmother to the biological father who has a long criminal history of arrests and incarceration.

Custody is currently in the hands of the biological father as per temporary order of Judge Christy Little, following hearings with no evidentiary proceeding. Litigation is ongoing. Custody transfer to the hands of the protective guardian is mandatory to avert profound trauma and damage to the children.
